1. Open the file that you want to edit. To open an existing file, in Photoshop, you perform the following: 1. Select the File menu, choose Open, and then choose the file to open. Or you can press Ctrl+O (Windows) or Cmd+O (Mac). You see the open dialog box, as shown in Figure 2-2. In the File Type box of the Open dialog box, you see the file format that Photoshop is expecting. You can also drag and drop a new file onto the Photoshop window. (The New menu item is available on the File menu.) 2. Select the file and then click Open. Photoshop opens and renders the file into the Photoshop workspace. Depending on how the file's organization is set up, Photoshop takes you to the new document that is the result of the rendering operation. Photoshop also allows you to reopen and edit an existing file. On the File menu, choose Open. Then select the file you want to open. This command opens the file and renders it to a new document. Don't attempt to open a photo from a disk or CD-ROM unless you own it or the photographer has given you permission. Photographers often lose access to their images if they make this mistake; you can never get your money back. (The file format used by Photoshop is RIP, or Raster Image Processor, which Adobe bought from Thomas Brothers, Inc.) 3. Select a different file in the Open dialog box if you'd like. Hold the Shift key down and click the file with the top-left thumbnail to select a file that's already open. Or drag a different file onto the Photoshop window. 4. Select the file's contents and press Ctrl+A (Windows) or Cmd+A (Mac). Photoshop selects the entire file as a single object. Pressing the Enter key (Windows) or Return (Mac) closes the dialog box and makes the selected file the active image. 5. To create a new file, open the New dialog box or press Ctrl+N (Windows) or Cmd+N (Mac). To create a new file from scratch, select the New Document button, as shown in Figure 2-3. The New Document dialog box opens, prompting you to provide a new file name.

Q: trying to understand independent javascript confirm box i was trying to print out the name of all the elements in the page but then i made a mistake by naming the same variable a lot of times and the code stopped working. So, i tried to find a different way to do it but i have never even been in an alert box before. So i looked up a good site and found this: function confirm() { var result = confirm('Are you sure you want to delete this? -
